

The New Zealand Forest Service 100-year anniversary

Chris Goulding

The 100-year anniversary of the establishment of the New Zealand Forest Service was marked with a celebration at Parliament on 24 September 2019 hosted by the Hon Shane Jones, Minister of Forestry, and also attended by the Rt Hon Winston Peters, Deputy Prime Minister. There were some 120 guests, including Members of Parliament and past and present key members from the forestry sector.

Three forestry awards were made specific to the anniversary:

Peter Berg – Lifetime Achievement in Forestry

Peter has made a sustained and significant contribution to forestry over many decades, met and overcome significant challenges to advance forestry, and shown exemplary leadership when collaborating with colleagues and engaging with those with alternative views.

Peter Berg receiving his award from Julie Collins and the Hon Shane Jones

Guy Salmon – Kaitiakitanga Aotearoa

Guy has dedicated himself to the protection of forests and forest ecosystems, been at the forefront in shaping our attitudes to, and aspirations for, forests and forest ecosystems, and worked to advance the special relationship and connection between people and forests.

Guy Salmon receiving his award from Julie Collins and the Hon Shane Jones

Bruce Manley – Forestry Science

Bruce has made a sustained and significant contribution to forestry science, significantly advanced our understanding of one or more critical aspects of forestry science, and shown significant national and international leadership in forestry science.

Bruce Manley receiving his award from Julie Collins and the Hon Shane Jones